

THE INDIAN FEAST

Over two hundred years ago, on the coast of North America, lived many Indian tribes. One of these tribes was called [left/ the/ den] Serinos Clan. Another was called People [of/ as/ we] Blue River. Both tribes were very powerful. [They/ Days/ Tree] fought with each other to be [had/ in/ tip] the top position. When they fought battles, [each/ get/ from] side captured slaves.

Chief Blue River [tree/ run/ was] killed in a fierce battle. The Serinos Clan captured [nerve/ young/ lately] Chief Blue River. They made him [the/ host/ went] slave of young Chief Serinos, who [goat/ was/ your] also a young man. Young Chief Serinos [high/ you/ was] very important and was treated with respect [was/ by/ do] all in his tribe. He had [turn/ boot/ many] necklaces, feathers, and robes.

Blue River, [law/ his/ set] slave, did not have anything. He [see/ ton/ was] fed the scraps of food left [will/ harm/ over] by members of the tribe. He [slept/ words/ deer] in a small hut with the [dogs/ how/ see] of Chief Serinos. No one spoke [fog/ to/ in] him unless they were angry or [needed/ tells/ worry] something. Yet Blue River remained loyal [hop/ us/ to] his master.

One day, the Serinos Clan [jar/ was/ wet] raided by the People of Blue River. Young Chief Blue River [ant/ here/ was] rescued and Chief Serinos was captured. Blue River [good/ tail/ made] him his slave. He was treated [poorly/ hairs/ where] by all in the tribe because [was/ he/ for] had treated Chief Blue River with disrespect [did/ by/ one] making him his slave. Many wanted [lid/ be/ to] sacrifice him. Blue River watched the [fear/ high/ truck] in the face of Chief Serinos. [How/ He/ Dot] thought of how proud he used [to/ let/ rat] be. Blue River knew that Chief Serinos never [off/ bit/ had] been cruel to him or [big/ had/ nose] tried to harm him. He told [the/ sold/ from] tribe that Chief Serinos would not [next/ die/ lock].

Many of the elders became angry. "[He/ Did/ Hot] made you -- our Chief -- his slave. [He/ Lot/ Ice] must die!" said one. The others [sleep/ opens/ agreed] and began yelling. Chief Blue River [blow/ step/ said], "Very well. You may execute our prisoner [after/ fire/ well] you answer one question."

"What is [hat/ pop/ it] that you wish to know?" the [walks/ ferry/ people] asked.

Chief Blue River looked at [not/ the/ you] whole tribe and asked, "Why is [bet/ it/ use] that we are at war with [the/ word/ is] Serinos Clan? What is at the [wind/ root/ house] of our disagreement?"

Tribe members stared [at/ so/ be] each other with awe. Who had [ever/ she/ left] heard of such a question? The [no/ two/ in] tribes had been fighting for so [only/ got/ many] years that no one remembered why [port/ was/ they] were fighting.

Chief Blue River was overjoyed. [He/ Nod/ Hop] was to become known as the Peacemaker [of/ egg/ its] Blue River because he ended the [soot/ bed/ war] between the two tribes and he [called/ should/ patty] for a feast. They ate venison, [clear/ salmon/ carpet], corn, and many other foods to celebrate [knew/ their/ green] new friendship.
